

ABSTRACT

A method and system for managing a project. A set of templates is provided, each template corresponding to one or more tasks of the project to be performed. Steps of the project are performed in accordance with the templates, which may be selected from a set of default templates, and may represent substantially all of the project. The project may be a good to be sold commercially, an information technology project to be implemented, or another type of project.